NKO offers Driving for Life Course

The Center for Personal Development (CPD) recently announced the release of the Driving for Life: Avoiding the Fatal Four, an interactive multimedia eLearning course to help Sailors and Marines stay safe when behind the wheel. The course, co developed with the US Marine Corps, is designed to fulfill both services' Traffic Safety Program requirement. Available on Navy eLearning and accessed through Navy Knowledge Online (NKO) My Education, Driving for Life complies with Department of Defense and Department of Navy requirements (DoD Instruction 6055.4 and OPNAVINST 5100.12) that every Sailor and Marine under 26 years of age complete a driver training course. The course covers proactive driving, reactive driving, and imminent collisions.

"The Revolution in Navy Training has shown us we have to be more creative with course development and delivery," said Capt. William Marlowe, CPD commanding officer. "So eLearning was a natural choice, but given the nature of our subject matter, we had to be sure that we weren't just throwing something together to satisfy a requirement. We want our Sailors and Marines to come away with a greater appreciation of the responsibilities they have as drivers, as well as teaching them tactics to be safer on the road."

The eLearning format also allows Sailors to return to the Web based training to refresh their skills after initial completion. Successful completion of the course, scoring 80 percent or better, is documented in NTMPS (Navy Training and Management Planning System) and reflected in Electronic Training Jacket, also accessible through NKO.

To learn more about Driving for Life, or to enroll in the course, log on to Navy Knowledge Online at www.nko.navy.mil and proceed to Navy eLearning found on the My Education page.

SJA Provides Info on Operation of Private Commercial Enterprise On-Board NAVBASE

The SJA Office recently received several complaints regarding the operation of personal businesses on-board the installation. COMNAVBASEGTMOINST 4060.1F prohibits the operation of any private enterprise on-board the installation without prior command approval. There are several ways in which approval may be obtained: contracting with the Government, entering a Personalized Services Contract with MWR, or entering a Concessionaire Agreement with NEX. Any type of private enterprise requires one of those forms of approval. For purposes of the instruction, any sale of goods or provision of services for remuneration amounts to private enterprise. There are, however, a number of exceptions. Individuals may provide certain types of services, such as occasional domestic work, gardening or tutoring without implicating the instruction. Additionally, an occasional yard sale is not prohibited, nor is participation in the Craft Sales hosted by MWR. Providers operating without proper authority must obtain command approval or risk adverse administrative action. To report a suspected violation, base residents may contact Security, or the CO's Hotline x4800. Hotline users will remain anonymous, and will not be included on reports that leave the Command Evaluator's office, or contact the SJA, x4454, LCDR Art Record, JAGC, USN, Staff Judge Advocate.

Innovation, Preparation for Future Navy Leaders

JO3 Andrew Stamper

Naval Personnel Development Command Public Affairs

Underway replenishments (UNREPs) are one of the most dangerous evolutions conducted on board Navy ships. There's always the potential for any number of mishaps. Due to the watchful eyes of Sailors such as rig and line captains, commonly seamen and third class petty officers, UNREPs are almost always completed safely and professionally.

Sailors performing leadership roles above their pay grade are not uncommon. To make sure these Sailors get the right leadership training at the right time, the Revolution in Navy Training's Center for Naval Leadership (CNL) is now aligning leadership training to the job Sailors perform and not to their rank. The Leadership Development Program (LDP) now allows all Sailors E-3 and above and officially assigned to an organizational leadership position to participate in the development of professional leadership.

"Previously, formal leadership training (then the PO2 Leadership training course) was not available to these first line leaders" said CNL Commanding Officer Capt. Douglas McDonald. "We are implementing a new Enlisted Leadership Development Program that ties the right training to the right Sailor at the right time ... no matter what their rank is. Not having leadership training tied to rank will allow all Sailors to capitalize on the opportunities along the Leadership Continuum at the most appropriate times throughout their careers."

The NAVADMIN 069/04, released March 24, describes the new Enlisted Leadership Development Programs and identifies the attendance policy and implementation details.

The first level of this sequential, progressive LDP is the First Line Leadership Development Program (FLLDP), which replaces the Petty Officer Second Class Leadership Training Continuum (LTC). This program is designed for all Sailors between E-3 and E-5 who are responsible for daily direction of subordinates, as seamen and petty officers are often put in these important positions.

The Primary Leadership Development Program (PLDP) is the second level of the new LDP, to replace the Petty Officer First Class LTC. It is designed for E-5 and E-6 Sailors who are assigned the divisional responsibilities of a leading petty officer.

The Advanced Leadership Development Program (ALDP) is the third level of LDP and is intended for first class petty officers and chiefs who are assigned the administration, supervision and training responsibilities of a divisional or departmental leading chief petty officer. This program replaces the Chief Petty Officer LTC. Two additional programs, the Command Leadership Development Program (CLDP) for E-8/E-9 and the Executive Leadership Development Program (ELDP) for FLTCM, CNOCM, etc., are currently under development by the Center for Naval Leadership.

In view of the LDP's linkage to leadership positions vice pay grades, the NAVADMIN further identifies changes in LDP completion requirements. Successful completion of the LDP is no longer required.

GTMO's little artists showed off their works of art during the W.T. Sampson Elementary and High School Art Show, at the elementary schools' library, March 25. Different styles, models and forms of artwork of every type were displayed, to include sculptures, digital art, paintings, drawings, photography and music.

Dawn Adams, high school art teacher, Shirley Bagget and Sonia-Lee Pollino, elementary school art teacher, organized this years event open to all GTMO residents.

Pollino and Adams were in charge of the artwork submissions from their respective schools, while Bagget was responsible for the music portions of the fair.

"This was an opportunity for the children to show off their talent and works. The attendance for the show was outstanding and we'd really like to thank the entire community for all their support," Adams said.

Ships Pull In, Ships Pull Out

Port Services Personnel Are Operating All About

During the past month, an increase in traffic in and out of Guantanamo Bay has been very evident, mostly due to the ongoing operations in Haiti. Port Services has felt the main brunt of these many ships frequenting our port and their men and women have stepped up to the increased operational tempo in an exemplary manner.

The HMBS Nassau recently arrived from "Operation Compassion" in and around Haitian waters for a brief stop for fuel and crew rest. "Port services is very happy to support the Nassau and the HMBS Bahamas during their short stays with us here by providing the best service and docking facilities we can," James Cich, chief harbor pilot said. With the recent closure of Naval Station Roosevelt Roads and the ongoing operations in Haiti, there has been a sharp increase in harbor traffic, with an average four ships a day entering port this past month and several of these have been US Navy gray hulls, he added.

The Port Services department consists of 14 permanent party members (including the dive locker), and 6 TAD personnel who will be leaving soon. Their primary and most noticeable missions consists of the Ferry operations, maintaining all aids to navigation (buoys and day markers), man port control tower 24 hours, seven days a week, provide Harbor Pilot, tug and pusher boat service, dock master service 24 hours, seven days a week, conduct boat inspections for personal crafts, and provide berthing arrangements and logistical support to USCG, USS, USNS, base barge and ships from various countries as part of their husbanding duties.

"These are generally our regular assignments; however on a case by case basis, we transport high ranking D/V's and VIP's. We have transported SECNAV, Vice Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, various 1, 2, 3 and 4 star Army and Navy Officers, and Presidential and Congressional BM1 Ed Benzing lowers the Generals flag after conducting a Distinguished Visitor boat run, one of many Port Services missions.

QM2 Daphne Long, performs dockmaster duties as HMBS Nassau pulls out of port, as the Port Services' primary husbanding agent, she has felt the majority of the brunt in increased port traffic due to the recent activities in Haiti. "On call, 24 hours a day, seven days a week, QM2 Long has not had a single day without a ship coming in this month and the average number of ships arriving in port has been four a day," Cich said.

USCG Dallas (WHEC-716), receives provisions, fuel and water from Port Services while in port.

Delegations,” explained BMC Maria Connaughton, Port Services senior enlisted advisor. “We also transport migrants, suspected drug smugglers, detainees, coordinate the placement and tow targets for the JTF live fire, coordinate the waterborne transportation for all Medevacs, maintain the only recompression chamber in the Caribbean providing diver support for underwater hull inspections, maintain and man the oil spill recovery team and act as Contracting Officer Representatives for Burns and Roe, Port and Harbor contract to include the Ferry’s and offshore surveillance boat, to name a few of our duties.”

Large 615 foot tankers, such as the Lawrence Gianella require the assistance of the YTB Dekanawida 831, to safely enter and exit GTMO.

JTF General Sites Views on GTMO & Leading

"This is a team, it's a team today and it's going to be a team that gets better and better.."

By SGT Jolene Staker

The JTF is operating under a new commander, BG Jay Hood.

With new leadership comes specific philosophies and expectations. "There are three things I would like to see in every leader — every Soldier, Sailor, Airman, Marine, and Coast Guardsman," said Hood. "I want all JTF troopers to be technically competent, willing to lead and dedicated to taking care of people," he said. In order to be technically competent it takes individual effort. It's not the leadership training the troopers — it's the troopers willing to constantly study, practice and do critical self-evaluation, said Hood. It is asking every day 'am I doing the best I can do' and more importantly 'what can I do better,' he said. "

In regards to Hoods outlook on the relationship between the Navbase and the JTF, he stated "This is a team, it's a team today and it's going to be a team that gets better and better in the time period we serve here. We're all after one thing and that is doing our job the best we possibly can as we execute the missions we're given and seeing that we take care of our people and families here on this naval base."

I expect all JTF Troopers to be willing to stand up and get out front and lead," said Hood. Hood believes that communication is critical to effective leadership. "You have to be able to communicate up, down and sideways," he said. Troopers need to be able to tell their leadership what is good and what isn't good. They need to talk to their peers to learn better ways to do their jobs. It is crucial that leaders can communicate to their subordinates what they expect them to do, when they expect them to do it and what standard they expect to be met. Dedication to each other is another area that Hood believes to be vital to success. "Some call it taking care of people," said Hood. "Every single one of us can do something to demonstrate taking care of each other." One of the things I will do over the next two years is to seek out ways to improve life for JTF Troopers as well as those who serve on the NAVBASE and their families, said Hood. If we strive to be technically competent, step out to be leaders and dedicate ourselves to taking care of people, we will continue to be a great organization fighting the war on terrorism - everyday, said Hood.
